Coroner Atkinson held an inquest over the body of a prematurely-born negro child last Friday. It was the child of Mitie Evans who lives on Mr. J. N. Sowell's farm four miles south of town, and was born dead, according to testimony given at the inquest, and had no chance to live. The woman was set free.

At a meeting of the county Teacher's Association at Chesterfield last Saturday it was decided to hold a field day this spring. The county has been divided into three districts with Pageland, McBee and Cheraw as places for the preliminary meets for each district. The winners in these meets will represent the districts in the county contest at Chesterfield. Cash prizes to be used for school improvement will be awarded the schools winning out in the final contests. A program will be announced soon and copies will be supplied to the schools.

Two fires in one day, both consuming established homes, is not usual for any community. The loss of Mr. Arant's residence four miles from town, and Mr. Watts' residence in town yesterday seem to remind us that we should make preparation for such emergencies. A few crude implements, such as ladders and extra buckets, would often save a home from destruction. They cost but little, but there is no time to provide them after the fire alarm has been given. Pageland citizens are to be commended for their efforts to save property on fire, but they cannot scale steep roofs or convey water without ladders and buckets.

The home of Mr. J. D. Watts in the southern part of town was destroyed by fire at eleven a. m. yesterday. The fire is supposed to have caught from the stove flue. Mrs. Watts had made a fire to cook dinner, but as the wood burned slowly she added some trash. It is thought that a spark from the trash escaped and lodged on the roof. When the fire was discovered the alarm was given and neighbors rushed in and saved most of the furniture. The fire was burning but slowly, and had good ladders been available the building could have been saved. The house was a large one and well furnished. The loss was partially covered by insurance.

Mr. J. A. Arant lost his residence and nearly all of its contents by fire early yesterday, Tuesday, morning. Mr. Arant arose early, made a fire in the stove and returned to his room, where he sat for sometime reading a paper. Young John Arant started to the lot to feed, and discovered the fire. They rushed into the kitchen, but were enveloped in flames when they opened the door. It was seen at once that the fire was beyond control. The iron safe, the organ and one bed were the only contents of the house that were saved. The smoke house was also burned, but the contents of it were saved. The dwelling and furniture carried $1,000 of insurance, which was less than one third their value.

Some person or persons broke into the Southern Express office Sunday night and stole three one gallon packages of liquor. The party was tracked across the Sowell field and the empty cartons found. The officials have no clue as to the guilty parties. The express company offers a standing reward of $25 for evidence sufficient to convict any one of breaking into its place of business.

Mr. J. C. Horne and Miss Verma Scott, of Patrick, were married Sunday evening, February 6th, at 7:30 o'clock by Rev. W. V. German at his home. Mrs. Horne is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Scott of Patrick, and is a young lady who numbers her friends by her acquaintances. Mr. Horne is a young man of sterling character and is a carpenter by trade. Here's wishing them much success as they start out in life together.

Pageland Three Day Chautauqua a Grand Success

Never in the history of Pageland has there been such a rare and grand opportunity for its people to benefit by such attractions and lectures as were held here last week.

These attractions were indeed town builders, and can well be called Booster movements.

In the very outset we were promised our money's worth, and we certainly got it.

The Columbia concert company coming first, gave us a splendid attraction. Especially were the people delighted with Mrs. Kellog and her readings.

Col. Gearhart is one of the foremost men of the day, noted for his splendid lectures. They have been delivered in the leading churches, colleges and universities in this state and other states. His lecture in the afternoon of the first day was a gem, while his lecture in the evening of the same day has been referred to by many as probably the best attraction of the season.

Next came Eugene Lockhart, the impersonator, on the afternoon of the second day. He will be remembered by old and young for the amusement he afforded. Along with him came Durno, the mysterious. We will not attempt to tell you what he did. Ask Prof. Dukes and Mr. Askins how he did it. They promised not to tell, but maybe they will.

On the afternoon and night of the third day the Alpine Yodlers in their native Swiss costumes furnished the amusement, and Dr. Hyde in his two lectures furnished both entertainment and instruction. A packed audience heard both of his lectures, one "The Richest man in Town," the other, "Should the Corners of the Mouth Turn Up or Turn Down." Both were inspiring and uplifting in an unusual degree, while entertaining and instructive at the same time.

Friday, the second day, was known as educational day. The teachers and school children from Pageland and the neighboring schools turned out in full. In the afternoon they were addressed by State Superintendent Swearingen. This assembling of the school children, with their marches, their floats and their school songs, was an inspiring scene. The children seemed to enjoy the occasion, and Pageland certainly enjoyed having them. Here is hoping they may all come again. The prize for the largest number of children on one wagon was divided between the Dudley school and the Mangum school.

So much was the Chautauqua as a whole enjoyed, that thirty five good men signed a contract to have one in November of this year. For diversion and entertainment of the right kind and for instructive talks and helpful lectures the chautauqua is not to be surpassed.
